

Taking music to the masses

STAFF REPORTER

CHENNAI

From Ilaiyaraaja to Ed Sheeran, an array of songs from a host of artistes pulled a huge crowd to the Chennai Metro Music Edit, at the Chennai Central Metro station.

After 19-year-old Jothi Kalaiselvi, a visually-impaired person with an intellectual disability, finished her performance, she received thunderous applause. Arjun Madhavan of Unwind Centre, which collaborated with the Metro for the project, said bringing music to public spaces would not just give artistes a great platform, it would also help showcase the kind of music available in the city.
